A REAL GARDEN SPOT IN LOGAN

A garden spot of beauty and a place well worth a visit from those who admire the works of skilled nurserymen and gardeners is the four acre plot owned and worked by Oia Larsen on East Third South street. This small piece of ground under the care and management of this well known gentleman is made the seat of employment of four or five men for nine months of the year, and returns to its owner an enormous earning over and above all expenses. True it is that hot beds and transplanting grounds are used over and over again as seasons change, but the fact remains that each acre is compelled to yield between one and two thousand dollars per year. Today all hardy spring vegetables such as radishes, turnips, beets, onions, cabbage, etc., are up and some of them will soon be on the market. These of course are not hot bed productions. Spinage and other holdover vegetables are now being marketed from this garden. According to Mr. Larsen the ground which will soon produce an abundant and profitable crop of spring stuffs will be worked again about June 1st and replanted with celery. From results obtained in previous years he further estimates that the celery crop alone will bring better than $1000.00 per acre of which half is clear profit. In order to properly care for the harvest of the late crops two frost proof cellars have been constructed, one with floor space 62 by 13 feet, the other about two-thirds the size. These are properly equipped with cement wash tanks, hydrant service etc, which materially aid in the final preparation for marketing.

Mr. Larsen is not growing trees at present but is acting as local representative of the Salt Lake Nursery company and is now busy planting some $2200.00 worth of trees and shrubs for that company. He carries a full stock of bulbs, roots, etc., of all flowering plants, and in this connection it might be stated that he is making a specialty of preparing and planting flower beds, lawns and hedges.

The Larsen gardens are attractive and will become more so as the season goes on; their real beauty, however, can only be known after a personal tour of the grounds.

CONGRESSMAN JOSEPH HOWELL SPENDS TWO DAYS IN LOGAN

OSTEOPATHIC

The fundamental principle of osteopathy is, that the body has within itself the power necessary to combat disease and that where the causes producing diseases are removed nature will affect a cure. All curable diseases are treated without drugs. Dr. E. J. Merrill, Osteopathic Physician, office, Howell - Cardon Bldg. m6
